

1 Both will and free will are possible in the expression of a multi-verse. That free will determines will as future determines past. The Will is the unchanging moment of all space and time which seeds the multiverse. The moment is our access to God as well as the fallen one, Satan.

3 This is how we can understand the compatibility of both will and free will.
4
5 Of course this challenges our perception and understanding of reality at it's core as,
as it is to us very concrete in form, much of our perceptive sense of reality is dependent on the linear expression of time and we take that perception as self-evident.

7 When you break down or compose the experience of perception as only dependent on the five senses we easily ignore the internal reality sense, that which brings our experience to our consciousness. Mind is nebulous to this experience when we only see and base everything on these physical sense perception when all of reality pipes from the internal moment. However our brain only responds to mind and mind is the refraction of the light in the moment space.

8
9 Ultimately we are given free will to allow us to free ourselves from the influences of Satan. So we can decide as we grow from wisdom where ignorance is knowing but ignoring, and thus conflicting with the love of Jesus.

10
11 If our consciousness can become pure, in the sense of being free from Satan's influence of the moment then our experience of reality as a collective will enter into heaven; that our experience of reality becomes that of synchronicity.

13 The Bible is a sort of guidebook for our species to navigate our understanding through God to gain His wisdom to discern for ourself good from evil. However the Bible is a writ through man of their political filters of the time of it's writing. While the Gospel is about spreading His understanding through love, it is never about dictating one persons understanding of the Bible unto another. Which is why politics should never be muddled in or with religion. Each passage of the journey to salvation is born into our individual consciousness.

15 The war between good and evil is played in the moment space. And our recollection of past and the determination of future are just manifestations of that moment space.
